Bound by Veterans

NEWSLETTER OCTOBER/NOVEMBER 2022

Dear Veterans and Families,

As the long hot summer drifts away and becomes a distant memory, we move into the autumn with its chillier mornings, fewer daylight hours and Christmas looming just round the corner!

In early August we set up a Bound by Veterans stall at the Wessex Country Fair show at Wilton. It was a scorcher of a day but there was a lot of interest in the stand and many BBV products were purchased and the sales raised funds for the charity.

Sadly August was overshadowed by the death of Rob Shepherd, Managing Director of Shepherds Bookbinders and co-Founder of Bound By Veterans. A full obituary is given below.

Bound by Veterans has developed an intern training programme which is now underway with two student veterans, Gilly Turner and Dean Williams. An article by our Principal Tutor, Mylyn McColl, about a recent visit made by her and the

In the last BBV Newsletter, mention was made by Ali for anyone who would like would like to join in making BBV products. The call is repeated here. We have a commission from one of our headline sponsors, the Worshipful Company of Leathersellers, to make 100 leather journals by next year.

THE LEATHERSELLERS' COMPANY

This is quite a challenge, but we will be paid for the job and the profits will go back into our BBV coffers to help more veterans discover the therapeutic benefits of this lovely craft. Do get in touch with us if you fancy finding out more.

Rob Shepherd - Co-founder of Bound by Veterans

It is with great sadness that we have to report the death of Rob Shepherd, Managing Director of Shepherds Bookbinders Ltd and co-founder of Bound by Veterans, who died on 13th August after a long illness. He set up his bookbinding business in 1988 and not only became widely known and respected amongst the bookbinding community but was also passionate about training and spared no effort in trying novel

Project, and as its prime sponsor helped it reach charitable status a year later. He then helped place Bound by Veterans on a secure footing by persuading the City & Guilds Institute to reinstate bookbinding onto its list of heritage crafts and provided the means by which we are now able to award these internationally recognised City & Guilds qualifications to Veterans. In recent years he was a catalyst for the creation of the Queen's Bindery Apprenticeship Scheme and pivotal in the development of national Apprenticeship standards for bookbinding, although perhaps behind it all he was inspired by a keen desire to find Veterans from his "special" charity who might graduate from classes at the Daffodil Barn to a full-blown commercial apprenticeship in the bookbinding trade.

He promoted the charity tirelessly through the Worshipful Company of Stationers, of which he was a Liveryman, and the many other links he had made in the bookbinding and commercial world. He gave us a solid financial start and mapped out a development programme that we follow today. It combines craft training with the therapeutic support for which this charity has become synonymous, and produces a regime that promotes confidence, self-esteem and mental well-being. We will miss his advice and influence but, above all, will miss a real gentleman who supported us with charm, dedication and determination.

COURSE NEWS

BBV Introduction to Bookbinding Sessions

BBV began running these courses about 8 years ago at Tedworth House in Tidworth. The scheme faltered during the Covid pandemic but it has resumed at Tedworth House now on a regular, monthly, basis and the sessions there are taught by BBV volunteers. In addition some courses are now given remotely by Zoom by our Principal Tutor, Mylyn McColl. Also, they are available as in-person courses in Portsmouth and in Scotland. Full details of these and who to contact can be found in the Bookbinding Courses 2022 section below.

Other Introduction To Bookbinding Courses

This course was a Zoom course held in Livingston in Scotland, with instruction given by our Principal Tutor, Mylyn McColl, who can be seen on the screen at the back.

Here are a couple of comments from students who attended:

- From Pam McLennan: Great to catchup yesterday. Brilliant to do the book-binding and to chat with the group. Will look forward to hearing more about how the guild certificate progresses.
- From Hazel: Many thanks for a great day! Never thought I could do this?? But I did with the help and instructions of everyone. Looking forward to the next challenge?

Gerry McGregor of Veterans Tribe Scotland (VTS) has begun taking classes in Scotland and one of the students, Ginny, sent in this picture of the book she made and gave the following comment about the course.
"Hi Gerry, thank you for today's book binding session, it was informative and fun. And this is now my knitting log book!"

Bound by Veterans Intern Training

BBV has developed a training programme for interns to learn about bookbinding and develop their skills in the craft. A summary of the scheme is:

Aim. To produce rapidly trained bookbinders who are qualified at least to C&G

- Workshop Instruction and “Bench-Time”
- City & Guilds Tuition up to Level 3
- External Educational Visits
- In-House work for Sponsors (Bound by Veterans and Shepherds)

Programme. The weekly training programmes will include elements of more than one facet. This aims to provide plenty of variety and to promote interest in the profession.

BBV currently has two veterans who have embarked on the internship, Gilly Turner and Dean Williams. As part of the course includes external educational visits one was arranged to Bayntun's, a commercial bindery in Bath. Our Principal Tutor, Myln, accompanied the two students on the visit, and her report of the visit is below.

Edward Bayntun-Coward welcomed us and gave a very informative history of the building, it used to be a post office sorting building before George Bayntun took it on in the 1930s and some of the benches are the original sorting desks. We then had a good look around the bindery where Don showed how they thin leather, rather than splitting it they have a machine that sands the thickness away. We saw the gold edging station - all books are edged by hand with gold leaf. Then Spike talked us through some of the design processes as we looked at a brochure of some of their prestigious bindings. Next we moved on to see Tony at work in the finishing department working on a lovely design of Animal Farm with a lovely pig - just one of the binderies thousands of hand tools.

drawers of blocks from previous bindings including Winnie the Pooh and Alice in Wonderland.

It was fascinating to see a different bindery space, how it functions with different staff taking on different stages and what type of work they produce. Dean and Gilly very much enjoyed the experience and asked many interesting questions.

Edward then took us upstairs to see some of his collection including some spectacular French Bindings - we talked about how we don't know who actually bound the books as the French way is that the designer gets the kudos and the binder is usually an unknown craftsman.

The exhibition of bindings was also very good and it was great to see the different variety from case binding, to fine leather binding, gold finishing, to artist book.

The whole team were very generous with their time and knowledge, we were there for 2 hours and assured Dean and Gilly would be welcomed back if they wished to visit again in the future. - Mylyn

DONATIONS AND SPONSORS

In previous newsletters we announced that BBV was, once again, successful in qualifying for a grant from Tesco - Community Grants funds (previously known as the Bags of Help scheme) during the months of April/May/June this year.

We reported that in total we have been awarded £8,500, a truly staggering amount, congratulations Wendy.

We thank Tesco for their enormous generosity in supporting Bound by Veterans through their Community Grants scheme.

We have received a cheque from the Fratton Branch of Tesco for the £1500 we were awarded there through the Community Grant scheme.

Wendy Lagden and Kevin Reilly (a BBV member) went there on 12th Sept. Wendy gave a brief talk on what we do at BBV before being presented the cheque alongside a few members of the Tesco staff. The staff, and Kevin, are holding a few samples of Level 1 bindings. .
